

THE Commodore

1939

Never read any book that is not a year old.—Emerson.

The true University of these days is a Collection of Books.—Carlyle.

He hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink.—Shakespeare.

A good book is the precious life-blood of a master-spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose to give life beyond life.—Milton.

There are men that will make you books, and turn them loose into the world, with as much dispatch as they would do a dish of fritters.—Cervantes.

Miss Helen Louise Dail

Of making many books, there is no end: and much study is a weariness of the flesh.—Ecclesiastes.

The love of learning, the sequestered
nooks,
And all the sweet serenity of books.
—Longfellow.

He might be a very clever man by nature for aught I know, but he laid so many books upon his head that his brains could not move.—Robert Hall.

That book in many's eyes doth
share the glory,
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story.
—Shakespeare.

FOREWORD

In this, the COMMODORE of 1939, we, the editors, have endeavored to recall the pleasant memories brought to mind in the activities and accomplishments of the graduating class and other members of the student body. If these pages transmit to the reader the happiness of our high school days, we have succeeded.

Rebecca MacAlpine

*T*HE beloved librarian of Maury, who, by her patience, tact, and helpfulness, has contributed immeasurably to the success and happiness of our school days, we, the Class of 1939, affectionately dedicate this edition of the

COMMODORE

REBECCA MacALPINE

Books are yours,
Within whose silent chambers
Treasure lies
Preserved from age to age,
More precious far
Than that accumulated store of gold
And Orient gems which, for
A day of need,
The Sultan hides deep in Ancestral tombs.
These hoards of truth you
Can unlock at will.

—Wordsworth.

Art Work In The Commodore

When the students in the Art Department were informed that this year's theme is BOOKS, they packed their paint boxes, rushed down to the nearest library, and there, right under the SILENCE sign, debated on how to use the theme with pictures. Finally they compromised: Their plan, primarily, was to add to the number of beautiful books by compiling one. They decided that the book should picture the history, great characters, and famous authors of widely-read volumes. This done, they all took out library cards and planned to look around for a suitable and different medium with which to work. They read a bit, and read some more.

After hours of experimenting, the students, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Richmond, art instructor, and Dorothy Sheil, Art Editor of the "Commodore," turned to water-color wash — that is, black paint with plenty of water. Here is a brief explanation of the pictures.

Dorothy Sheil's bright elf, Ex-Libris, is found again in the role of Finis at the end of our "Commodore."

The history of books through the ages begins with the cairn, the period of monuments made of boulders. Following this is the Egyptian, or hieroglyphic age during which letters were chiseled on the face of tombs. Third, the pictograph period shows picture-writing on buffalo skins by the Indian. These three are products of Dorothy Sheil. Berkeley Armand painted the last two of the series, the manuscript and press ages.

The mural of great characters is by Nell Bryant. They are Romeo and Juliet, Rip Van Winkle, Alice in Wonderland, Hamlet, Tom Sawyer, Wilbur Micawber, David Copperfield, and Marie Antoinette.

Emily Coleman painted the characters of the next mural, "A Tale of Two Cities." They are the three Jacques, Madame Defarge, Lucie Manette, Charles Darnay, Sydney Carton, Dr. Manette, King Louis XVI, and Marie Antoinette.

Maury Alma Mater

Maury, fair Maury,
Mould thou our destinies,
Guide us aright in all we do;
Thy name we cherish,
Thy mem'ry honor,
Our Alma Mater, staunch and true.

Great is thy prestige,
Greater thy promise,
Glorious thy past; thy future sure;
Maury, stand steadfast;
Maury, lead truly;
Fair Alma Mater, strong and true.

Proud is thy hist'ry,
And proud thy spirit,
Leading us on when duty calls;
Thy name we'll glorify
And ever love thee,
Dear Alma Mater, great and true.

JANUARY CLASS HISTORY

January 1936 . . . Today, with a little thrill and maybe just a little regret at leaving Junior High, we, the class of '39, were launched upon the beginning of our Senior High life. We were undaunted by the glances thrown us by dignified upper-classmen as we wandered through the spacious halls, wondering what the future held for us.

January 1937 . . . One year has passed, and we have reached our first goal. Now, as progressing Juniors, we look back and see a year filled to the brim with excitement and hard study. During these months we realize that we have become a part of the great student body that is making history for Maury High.

January 1938 . . . Can it be that we are really Seniors? As we look back upon the preceding twelve months, we have a feeling of satisfaction in realizing we have filled them with so many delightful occasions. Shall we ever forget The Maury Merry Minstrels in Candyland? And didn't the scenery look good enough to eat? We have acquired a lovely new flag—our own—which adds its regal splendor to each football game and glorifies our stage. During the past year there has been so much rumor of war across the sea that Maury felt that she must do her part in preserving peace in America. Acting on this behalf, the Hi-Y presented a "Panel Discussions on War and Peace." We were proud of our students, who won superior ratings in the State Music Festival. Also, we must not forget "The Black Valise," so convincingly presented by the Dramatic Club at Charlottesville.

January 1939 . . . We are certain that our last lap has been the best. We were as "proud as Punch" when Mr. Games and Eddy Rogers got together and wrote and had published "The Commodore Maury High March." The boys whistled and the girls "oh-ed" and "ah-ed" at the handsome samples of Maury's personalities, which were displayed at the Valentine program. In the Spring we forgot our cares, dropped everything, and went along "The Northwest Passage" with the "Maury Merry Minstrel" performers. In commemoration of Arbor day, the Biology classes planted many lovely shrubs, which make a fitting setting for so fine a school. Again our dramatic and musical members brought home laurels from the tournaments. The Spring found many of us studying hard for Latin, French, and Spanish tournaments.

However, all good things must come to an end, and so our happy, carefree life at Maury terminates. Each of us has reaped his reward in full measures of fun and honest-to-goodness hard work. We shall miss the artistically-carved desks and familiar classrooms, witnesses to so many failures and a little success. Yet our Alma Mater has nourished us with something no one can take away from us. She has instilled in our hearts ideals and standards which produce a feeling that we, as graduating Seniors, now possess,—a feeling which only those who have attended Maury can appreciate.

So we say "thanks" and "au-revoir" to a grand school and an equally grand faculty.

JUNE CLASS HISTORY

1955 is here! At last we have a chance to see our old classmates of '39. Remember the important day when we planned to meet again? Then, two months ago, our own Junior and Senior Secretary, Belle Faucette, sent us those cute invitations to meet in this very Recreation Hall of the 1955 New York World's Fair at exactly four o'clock on June 10. A thrill ran through us when we received the invitations, but now there is a deeper sensation taking hold as we realize it lacks but one minute of four.

We are the first to arrive and are seated in the star-shaped room, thinking over the wonderful inventions that have become commonplace since way back in the '39 World's Fair — television, autogiros which are converted into cars at a moment's notice, perpetually filled fountain pens, fog dispellers, permanent cures for hay fever and cancer, and even air traffic cops.

Oh, here's the first arrival. It's Miss Blake, our indispensable Senior Sponsor and guiding light throughout our three years in Maury. Really, if it hadn't been for her . . . "Hello, Miss Blake! I'm fine, thank you. It's grand to see you again. I was just thinking how lost our Class would have been in '39 (decidedly more so in '36 when we were Sophs) without your understanding and helpfulness.

"Look; there's Vincent Thomas coming in. Wasn't he a good President during our three high school years? He talked so easily and fluently, and he played tennis like a regular Don Budge. He and Allen White . . . Why it's Mary Atkinson, Miss Blake! She worked so hard in her Senior year, taking in money for class dues, caps and gowns, and "Commodores," from more than 500 graduates. She was voted Best All Round along with Dave Fitzgerald, and no wonder. There's our football hero now with a former teammate, Hewitt Dunn.

"Belle! Everytime I see you I think of all the appointments you had to get straight for Senior pictures. I bet somebody was forever putting off his sitting till another day and upsetting the schedule . . . Bill Romm! Our old Hi-Y President in person! Remember when you and Billy Redfern and Cary Savage planned that Hi-Y convention? Who's with you? Oh, it's Harry Jones, our Vice-President of the Senior Class and Hi-Y. Isn't it just like old times? Everybody seems to be coming in at once. In that crowd over by the door, did you see our sport participants looking spry as ever?

There's Jack Carr, Maury's ping-pong champion; Ed Hill, the splendid track man; Clarence Phiels, Jimmy Macon, Junius Rubin and Paul Hart, our basketball stars; Pat McCarthy and Mike Beckett, the old golf fiends; Augusta Williams, Jack Berard, Virginia State champion in his Junior year, and Laddie Walker, our chief bowlers — all in one group. What celebrities! Did any of them turn pro?

"Hey, Cary Savage and Eddie Wolcott, how are you? Is your caroling as amazing as ever, Cary? Eddie, I see you have lived up to your reputation in the Hall of Fame as the best . . . well, it seems simply centuries since you both were in the Maury Merry Minstrels with Charlie Laird . . . Speaking of the devil — hello, Charlie! Oh, and there is your partner to a top title in the Hall of Fame, Eddie — it's Jean Bell, looking as pretty as ever.

"Hello, 'Commodore' Staff! Hello, Editor Fannie Brooke! The last time I saw you, you were taking on old age over the big job. Putting out an Annual is a whale of an undertaking in anybody's life, but you did a beautiful book. There are Dot Sheil, the '39 Art Editor, and Emma Jean Calevas, a most promising assistant and author . . . How nice to see you, Most Intellectual One! . . . Yes, indeed, I remember you, Carolyn Wiley, when you took highest honors two years in the Latin contests . . . And, Nancy Earnest, how is your glee-club-trained voice? . . . Well, if there aren't those ticklers of the keys — Joe Patterson, Leslie Bobbitt and Evelyn Ficarra!

"Here's a bevy of the ex-club officers who sparkled in '39. They were all so outstanding — an unusually fine group. In our class, even if I do say so, Miss Blake, I think we had more prominent seniors than any previous one. In fact, there were so many, it's difficult to name them all offhand. That triangle over there, so absorbed in talk, must be Joe Baker, Raymond Ellis and Jack Callahan — no doubt with baseball the subject under discussion.

"Lucine Schmitz! How are you? Parlez-vous francais as fluently as you used to? . . . Wonder where Max Baumeister is? He surely was a wow of a 'Commodore' business manager . . . and that reminds us of the good old 'Maury News' with its able Editor-in-Chief, Mary Gwynne Campbell. Boy, could she get things done!

"You know, until I just saw you, Jackie Madden, I had forgotten all about the Senior Valentine program. You and Virginius Stell made an adorable 'school daze' couple. And the rest? . . . good to the last drop of the curtain — Mary Payne Baldwin and Lankie Whitehurst as the bicycle-built-for-two'ers; the Hansen twins; Bill Williams; Paul Kaufmann — not to mention my partner, Hurley Butler — oh, gee! I'll say I remember them all!

"Hello, High School Student Club Presie. It's good to see you, Fleta. How's Miss Gregory's bowling after 16 years? . . . You know, Miss Blake, I bet three-fourths of these ex-students are married, and I'm calling them all 'Miss.'

"Last, but certainly not least, to arrive — in fact, I'm sure, if we were going by numbers, they would rank first in the hearts of all gathered here — are Mr. Games and his daughter, Florence. Wasn't it a thrill to be able to present to Maury our first school flag in our Junior year? Please sing something for us before we leave, won't you, Flossie? . . . Mr. Games, I'll tell you a secret of 16 years' standing — our Class has always been proud they graduated along with you. We often think how fortunate the new school was to get you as Principal, and we were glad we weren't left behind to mourn with Maury over her loss!

"What did you say, Miss Blake? Oh, Bill Romm wants the floor . . . That is the best idea anyone has yet had, Bill . . . What, a toast? All right! Here goes — A TOAST TO THE BEST SPONSOR AND OFFICERS ANY CLASS HAS EVER HAD — and we wish them to know we'll remember them in our heart of hearts 'forever and a day'."

"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea, in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem.

"When they had heard the king, they departed, and lo, the star, which they saw in the East, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was."
— Matthew 2:1,9.

"The Saint" is a story of Nicholas—Giver of Gifts, of little David, and of the Wise Men who follow the star that heralds the coming of the Christchild. It is an appreciation of the true spirit of Christmas, as changes are effected in the thoughts and actions of others in the play.

Nicholas, the owner of the gift shop, is timeless in age. He was here when the Wise Men first came. He is here when the Wise Men come again. People from all over the world come to buy gifts and to consult him about the choosing and giving of gifts. Nicholas gives and accepts nothing in return. His last gift is that of the little David whom he has befriended and for whom he finds a home.

Nicholas is left alone with empty hands in an empty shop. The guiding star still shines brightly in the East. The Wise Men return and Nicholas goes with them to follow the star.

The Christmas play was directed by Bernice Bradshaw and Frances Norsworthy, sponsors of the Maury Dramatic Club

The Maury Choir was under the direction of Sena B. Wood

A Senior And The Photographer

I think the day that you're going to have your picture taken, that is, if it falls on a school day, is like a day in the mad house.

It was March the first, and I had just made an appointment with the photographer for the following day at four o'clock. I immediately wondered what I would have to do, how the photographer looked, and what kind of personality he had.

After a very restless night I decided to get up and go to school. Then I remembered that today was the day. What should I wear? I looked at my watch. It was ten minutes after eight. It was too late to worry about what to put on, so I reached for the first thing I saw.

I dressed as rapidly as possible, and started downstairs for breakfast. But I found that I did not have a shirt on. Then I opened the drawer and scrambled for a shirt—green, blue, brown, plaids, checks, stripes? But, still I was not satisfied. Ah! there it was, a white shirt. I ran downstairs to eat, and finished at twenty minutes to nine.

Next, I ran upstairs to get a tie. What color goes well with a brown suit and white shirt? At first I was unable to find a tie that I liked, but later decided to wear a blue one with white stripes. I snatched the tie off the rack; one, two, it was on. By the time I was halfway down the steps, I grabbed my books and ran as fast as possible for school.

Now it was a matter of seconds; would I make it? I slammed the door to the school entrance, and ran up the steps two at a time. Down the hall, around the corner, and I had reached my home room. I opened the door, and to my surprise the room was empty. Where was everybody? Between breathing spells, I looked at my watch. I had to look twice to be sure! Yes, I was correct; it was only eight-thirty.

Bewildered, I sat down to ponder. Soon one of my friends arrived, and I told him of my predicament. "But, where are your tie pin and handkerchief?" he asked. I knew it! I just had to forget something!

After reaching my destination, I went to the photographer's studio. It was only three-thirty, so I had to wait half an hour. Each tick of the clock brought me closer to my doom. Every second—was my tie straight? Was my hair parted neatly? Was my handkerchief folded correctly? My nerves were on edge.

Then came a voice, "Mr. Gatling, we will be ready for you in three minutes." Each minute seemed longer than the other. The last three minutes before a man is executed are not so long as the three minutes I waited.

Finally, after the torture, the photographer was ready. "Sit over here, please." He turned on a brilliant light and said, "Don't mind that; you'll get used to it in a minute." In spite of this, tears were streaming down my cheeks. Then he said, "Turn your head just a little bit to the left."

After a few ups and downs, to the left, and various awkward positions, he said, "That's it; now smile." Then he turned me around, pinched my cheek, folded my hands, and said, "That's it; now a nice big smile. Now let's try one like this. That's it; now look at Hortense." (Hortense was a small stuffed teddy bear sitting on the camera.)

"I'm getting tired of sitting under this bright light. When are you going to take the pictures?" I said.

"I'm through; you can get your proofs next week."

I left the studio, dazed, trying to think when he took the picture. Then it came to me,—"That's it; now smile!"

I knew that the pictures would be awful. One week later, I went back for the proofs, and to my surprise, they were surprisingly good. Today, when I look at the pictures they remind me of that session in the mad house.

Whenever you go to have your picture taken, be sure to lay out your "trousseau" one week ahead of time.

When the photographer says, "Now, look at Hortense," don't forget a nice, big smile. And so it's adieu until you see Hortense and her guardian.

My Last Carefree Summer

A Page of Verse

By MARY GWYNNE CAMPBELL
(Winner of the Maury Award for Poetry)

Behold my tracings in the sand
Beside the sea,
Before the surging tide steals in
And makes a mockery of me.

THE DAY I DIE

The day I die
The birds will sing
And by my bed
A burst of Spring
Shall shower its fragrance
On the air.
On such a day
I would not care.

WIND

I would not have peace,
For the soul of me
Is turbulent like the winds.

But I would live,
For there is passion in my veins
Like the gale that blows from the northward sea.

And I would love,
For there is in my breast
Something like the breeze that murmurs
Landward through the palms.

And I would contend
With invincible forces,
For something in me loves a fight
Like the wind that struggles with the sea

Writhing snakelike in horror
At its own malefaction.

I would know many men,
And like the tropic calm
That loses its sweetness in lasting overlong,
I would wander.

And like the wind would I die —
Moving surely, grandly to the last.

ON ARMISTICE DAY, 1939

Lay aside the tarnished sword
And rattle not the hilt,
Hide your banner victory-stained
Lest it betray your guilt.

. . . Or take your glory where it lies,
Sprawled to earth, till your last son dies.

Declaim your pride alone within
The silent chambers of the dead.
If this be yours, then take the crown
And wear it dripping on your head!

BARGAIN

Then sell your sallow soul
For meager gold,
The stinted praise
That comes from out reluctant lips,
And never see the bare birch trees
Or sunny still October days.

So soothe your pallid pride
With scented balm
That yet inside
The tuneless soul of you shall die
And parching never know its need
And never guess it was denied!

In the market place I sat,
My wares upon my knee
For all the throng to see
As they came to barter there.
I sold them all — save three:
My song, my son, and thee,
And the rose I wear twined in my hair.

So I would it were with thee!

The Vineville Post Office

(State Prize Story for 1939)

At eight-thirty Shackle closed his detective magazine. He rose slowly and began going through the huge mail bags that lay at his feet.

The sun was just beginning to make patterns on the floor of the post office. As he looked through the morning mail, Shackle mumbled to himself, "Miss Richards, Mr. Carfield, Miss Hornly — from the way she talks, Hornblow would be better! Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore," and on down the list of names that represented the inhabitants of Vineville.

"Wal, Mr. Chips, we got right smart mail today. Guess I better get it boxed 'fore them folks come a callin' for it. Ole man Adams is still gettin' bills from the tailor that made his last suit of clothes fifteen years ago. Rich folks always squeezes their pennies. Y'er know, Chips, I reckon that's why they got 'em to squeeze."

This bit of philosophy had no evident effect on Chips. He yawned and wound his body in a circle of dark fur. Chips, after five years of being the post office cat, had grown accustomed to Postmaster Shackleford's observations and bits of philosophy. Shackle, as he was affectionately called, always told Chips about the mail that had come in during the night. Sometimes while he separated it and puffed his over-mellow pipe, he planned what he would do if one of the criminals whose pictures were on the bulletin board was suddenly to confront him.

But this morning people started coming in early and Shackle's monologue was cut short.

"Mornin', Mr. Thomas. Ain't seen you for quite a spell. Been sick I heerd. We old folks have a time, always ailin'. Yes sir, got two letters for you today. Sorry to hear about your son's accident. Always said young folks shouldn't oughter have free rein and fast cars, but I reckon you've had quite a time of it since the Missus died."

Shackle paused and reached for another letter.

"Here, you can take this to your daughter. It's from her young man in the city. One comes every day. Wal, so long."

"Howdy-do, Mr. Adams. Got a bill for you today."

Shackle's blue eyes twinkled merrily. "Been throwin' yer money away again? It's the third bill you've got in the past two years. Never mind gruntin' at me, Fred Adams. I know, if that beard warn't cheaper than wearin' ties, you'd have cut it off forty years ago!"

Mr. Adams sputtered a couple of times, snatched his bill, and banged out of the door. Shackle chuckled softly and winked at Mr. Bennet, who had witnessed the episode.

"Y'er know some day I'm goin' to make him mad!"

After a brief investigation Shackle announced, "No, sir, Bennet, ain't got no mail for you today. Wal, don't feel too bad about it. Women folks are funny. They like to keep a fella danglin', and not writin' letters works wonders."

He patted the young man's shoulder and added kindly, "Sure, Son, I know how you feel, but you've got to give her a little time. She's just startin' to make good and wants to be let alone for awhile."

Just as he was leaving, Dr. Davis strode briskly in.

"Hello, Doc! See you ain't dead yet. Jest don't take any of your own pills, and you'll be here quite a while. Yeah, got several letters for you this morn', but I can tell they ain't no money in 'em. Doc, why don't you start chargin' your patients? Y'er heart's big as an aquarium, an' when it comes to money matters, yer head's just as watery."

His tone changed, and he became serious. "Sure, Doc, I understand, but tain't fair for folks to do you like that. Why, you've done this town more good than all the gover'ment projects put together. Folks just don't know."

"Mornin', Miss Hornly. Here's yer letter. No, ma'am, don't know who it's from. I ain't curious like some folks."

Shackle coughed significantly. "Wal, now that you mention it, Eddie Bennet was here awhile ago. Didn't say anything about the mornin' paper—H-m-m-m! It's a shame with him bein' so anxious. I do declare—yes—then what? Well!"

During these last remarks Miss Hornly had been rattling off news like an automatic press: "Mr. Bennet's girl friend had been married in New York and the announcement was in the morning paper. Widder Bryant's daughter's run off with some half-witted college boy. Lands a-Goshen! The wealthy Mrs. McCowan, who was a newcomer to Vineville, had been indicted in an international jewelry theft. June Redford and James King, after ten years of courting, was to be announced in church this next Sunday. And did Shackle know that Doc was calling at Granny Sims' house every day?"

No, Shackle didn't know. As she turned to go, he called cheerily after her, "Good-bye. I'll let you know if I hear any news you don't." . . . Whew! — How that woman can talk!"

The rotund postmaster ran his hand through his thin hair and was about to relax for a moment, when a blond cyclone in a blue linen dress whirled in.

"Hi, Shacks! Swell day, huh? Where's my letter? You know you've worn a blue shirt and red suspenders ever since I can remember? Gosh, hurry, where's my Honey's missive?"

"My! Don't you ever run down, Jenny? Your letter! Why, I gave it to your Pa and he . . ."

"You did what?" Jean interrupted with a gasp. "Ho-ly Smokes! I'm sunk. The Honorable John Thomas told his only daughter—that's me—that if I ever communicated with that-that—well, never mind what he called him,—again, he'd confiscate my car and send me to Miss Primfloss or sumpin's school. Well, I guess I better start packing."

Jean went sadly out of the post office.

Shackle removed his gold-rimmed spectacles and rubbed his eyes. "Chips, ever' time I run my hand in other folk's hollo' logs, I get caught in a trap."

A soft voice spoke to him. "Any mail for Mrs. Johnson?" The owner of the voice went slowly towards the door when Shackle answered negatively.

"Funny thing about her," he mused. "She used to get letters addressed to Miss Sanders from a Mr. Johnson who, accordin' to the different postmarks, did a lot of travelin'. Then for a while letters didn't come, but she and a young man holdin' hands and laughin' came together to the post office. After that, not-so-frequent letters came to Mrs. Johnson. Now she hardly ever gets mail from him. Funny folks, these travelin' men."

Left alone for a while, Shackle finished assorting the mail—post cards bearing friendly falsehoods; letters a certain young man would have given half of his life had he not written; letters that crinkled with money; infrequent letters to old mothers from prosperous sons and daughters; letters that had a small round lump in them about the size of an engagement ring; bills to both rich and poor that would go unpaid; letters bearing good news; letters with black borders; and letters from across the seas with names that Shackle couldn't pronounce.

Yes, he saw a lot and discussed it with Chips while the latter dozed in the sun. All day Shackle handed out mail, teased, sympathized, and advised, but every evening at six o'clock he shut the door of the small frame post office, straightened things up, and amid many sighs about "gettin' old" and "achin' joints", settled down to take up the detective magazine he had reluctantly put aside that morning.

The stories in his magazine were "real life." They were based on facts (editor said so). Shackle said they kept him in touch with the outside world. To him detective stories were the bright spot in his dull existence. One couldn't find life in a post office.

Maury In Rhyme and Rhythm

SONNET

In calm repose and peaceful, gentle sleep,
The earth in cool, gray, slumb'ring
 shadow lies;
Her twilight voices hushed in stillness deep
Until the Moon appears in eastern skies,
And, shining down from her great throne of light
Bestows rich alms on graceful, whispering trees.
She floods the earth with golden radiance bright,
And kindly bids her page, the sweet
 night breeze,
To play soft, silvery tunes upon his lute.
Tall, lithesome poplars gently sway and sigh.
While weeping willows, bent in grief,
 are mute;
They worship thee, fair goddess of the sky.
O Moon, while in thy pensive, stately mood,
Shine down and bless the earth's sad solitude.

— Eileen Garrett.

REMINISCENCE

Full many a day we've trod the path
That leads to the steps of Maury High,
But every good thing must reach an end,
And so we are bidding now "Goodbye."
The clatter of feet in halls we've heard,
As laughingly on from class to class,
We've chatted about the great weekend
And of the exam we didn't quite pass.
We've watched with a hope the clock on
 th' wall,
We've wished that the hours would glide
 by fast,
But now, after all, we find our wish
Is but to recover our happy past.
We'll always recall our teachers, who,
Along with our chums of high school
 days,
The Book of gay mem'ries bring to us,
The Book of good times and carefree
 days.

— Florence Games.

THE SPIRIT OF YOUTH

The Spirit of Youth lifts its eyes
To a land glorious and gay . . .
A land of soft blue skies
Where each may have his say,
A country where sweet freedom rings
Through each calm day and night . . .
A land which daily blessings brings
And sees that wrong's made right.
The Spirit of Youth hungrily yearns
For tingling excitement rare . . .
It daily lives and gratefully learns,
Finding its victory there.
The Spirit of Youth looks bravely ahead
With a happy heart . . . knowing no dread.

— Bonna Fay Godfrey.

SPRING

How do the trees and flowers know
When spring has come?
They cannot hear the bird's clear song
Nor recognize the hum
Of life and living things about them.
Yet every year
When winter's frost and chill have passed,
They wake, and rear
Their heads to greet the cheerful sun.
The heavens ring . . .
The whole world throbs and stirs with life
When it's spring.

— Mary Jane Batts.

THE POET'S WORK

In all this crux of rarest loveliness,
The coils of a solitary wall,
Or beauteous moonrise at a twilight's fall —
Stately, all charms that Nature does possess
Lie bare, her moods made manifest by tears
That hide the earth in opal fantasies,
Unyielding to the thought that beauty is
To crumble with the ever shallow years.
For those who lived and did not dare to sing,
Their fondest hopes the poets may attain,
As from their souls their deeper feelings wing
In comprehensive dreams; thus who shall feign
That Life in rudest palms shall capture these
And crush them in the maze of centuries?

JUNIOR CLASS

OFFICERS

President	LINWOOD HORNE
Vice-President	CHRISTIAN PETERSEN
Secretary	ELLSWORTH TALLEY
Treasurer	EDWARD PROPES
Sponsor	MISS MABEL WHITE

CLASS HISTORY

"Now, students, I wish to impress upon your memories that you are no longer Sophomores, no longer subject to the dominance of Seniors and Juniors, but that you are Juniors, grown-ups, in every sense of the word."

Thus said Miss White, Junior Sponsor, to the first Junior assembly of the year.

"And now, Charlie, what do you think of our candidates for secretary of the class?" quoth Harvey (Edgar Bergen) Parker to his dummy.

"Very nice, very nice, indeed," retorted the elfish little man. "Why can't we have two secretaries?"

"Enough of that, my lad. That might suit you, but it wouldn't be form."

And so the Junior Class officers, despite "Charlie McCarthy's" mischievous comments, were elected for 1938-39.

R. E. Lee's birthday, January 19, was the occasion for another successful assembly. It was our privilege to have as our guests the members of the Pickett-Buchanan Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, and the oldest living Norfolk Confederate veteran, Mr. T. N. Mayo.

Our program was high-lighted by the unexpected appearances of two members of the faculty, Messrs. Norris and Mau, whose respective musical performances were declared a rare treat.

Among the people who have continued their excellent work in Maury, since we entered as a class of 1,066 from Ruffner and Blair, are Cliff Speros, President of the Junior Red Cross Chapter; Martha Lee Hoffman, President of the Dramatic Club; Ralph O'Dette, Eddie Propes, Billy Old, Chris Peterson, Nell Richard, Ellsworth Tally, and a host of others of marked talent.

The Junior Class contributed two beautiful urns to the Maury stage, to add to the beauty of the auditorium on stated occasions.

It was the pleasure of the Juniors to introduce a new system of class voting in Maury, the date being moved from September to May—a wise change since the class business is thereby organized for the new term.

Great was the excitement of the Junior Class when asked to provide ushers for the 1939 February and June graduation ceremonies, with John Upton acting as chairman. This is always an event of considerable excitement, made more so by the realization that we would be the ones to don caps and gowns next year.

Thus have we grown from timid and Senior-fearing Sophomores to fame-expectant Juniors, who consider themselves ready, willing, and able to step into the places left vacant by the outgoing graduates.

— LINWOOD HORNE.

HOW TO BE HAPPY THOUGH MAURIED

INCOME

When I was in school I studied a book whose title was Problems in American Life.

And I found that one of the biggest problems of all was to obtain a job that would enable one to have enough income to maintain and support, in the style to which she would like to be accustomed, a wife.

OUTGO

When I read this book I found that the problem of income was not the only feature

For it happened to mention such outgo items as upkeep and clothing and food and heat and light and taxes and entertainment and many other expenditures that would be necessary for this creature.

SURPLUS

And then there was the problem of saving something for the day that is sometimes rainy.

And so I found out that it was not only desirable to balance the budget but to have a well defined surplus in order to take care of unforeseen economic items, called miscellany.

CLASS HISTORY

The 1938-39 Sophomore Class of Maury is the largest in the history of the school. We came from Blair and Ruffner, after two years of Junior High School, and at first we were reluctant to leave our smaller buildings and come to a large and enterprising affair like Maury. Most of us were scared at the idea of being with Juniors and Seniors, since we were such very small potatoes ourselves. However, it did not take us long to become accustomed to Maury, and now we feel perfectly at home here and like it.

A good many of us have joined the various clubs and find them most interesting. Some of us have gone out for athletics and other extra-activities; some are doing well in dramatics; some are becoming proficient in football and basketball; and a good many are members of the Glee Club. Besides, we are holding our own scholastically. Consult the Honor Roll!

Among our outstanding members are Luther White and Julian Grainger, both active in nearly every phase of school life. Odie Beckham and Lucy McNamara are probably our two most industrious girls. They belong to many organizations and are excellent students, both making honor reports throughout the school year. Jack Lewis, Mac Hill and Bobby Baylor are the Beau Brummels of the Class. If you are ever looking for these three, just go where you see the largest crowd of girls, and there in their midst you will find Jack, Mac and Bobby. Our two beauties are "D D" Murray and Nancy Dashiell. "D D" is a blonde, and Nancy is a brunette — most pulchritudinous. Bill (Beulab) Winn doubtless has something — it is hard to say what — but it surely gets 'em. Dick Mapp and Bill Johnson are fine athletes who will excel in football before the close of their school careers.

There are many notable students in our Class, but we cannot mention them all here. Time, however, will tell of their various achievements. We sincerely hope that, as we go on in our school life, we may leave behind us records of which we shall be proud. We feel that Maury is a great school and deserves the very best its students can give her.

If we have accomplished anything this year, it is largely owing to the fact that in Miss Frances Norsworthy we have the best sponsor who could have been selected for our particular group. We would, if space allowed, fill the whole "Commodore" with her praises; but we can only say here that Miss Norsworthy is always ready and willing to be bothered with our small problems and is never too busy to stop and give us advice on any subject. She understands so well that we came as green Sophomores to Maury, stumbling along, not knowing where to go or what to say; but, thanks to her, we now feel as big as anybody and able to look the rest of the school in the face. We are certainly pleased that our Sponsor continues with us through our whole three years at Maury.

We, the Sophomore Class as a whole, believe we have had a very successful year at the Senior High School. We have seen and done many things, and we hope to do more in the two years to come.

O Utopia! O Utopia! Where everything is sunny.
O Utopia! Where you dope-ia yourself with milk and honey.

PROGRAM (Continued)

The Wandering Minstrel	John Prince
Dopey	Ed Schuffman
Ferdinand	Knox Pannill and Bill Hubbard
Toreador	David Roane
Dream Sailboaters	Billy Hall and John Dalton
Stowaway	Douglas Shuler
Caveman Couple	Charles Laird and William Williams
Jungle Couple	William Robinette and Leon Saunders
Third Couple	Jerome Hughes and Roy Kennedy
Paw and Maw	Buddy Morris and Miss Helen Strickland
War	Harvey Parker
Fear	Lankford Whitehurst
Hatred	Bill McMurran

and Maury Chorus

SYNOPSIS: The Wandering Minstrel and Dopey are looking for that Never-Never Land where everything is perfect, and they find that the search for peace and contentment is varied. For Ferdinand a bouquet of posies is adequate, for others a sailboat fulfills their dreams, and for still others the good old days of long ago. When War and Fear and Hatred enter into the picture, the scene changes to chaos and madness until they are eliminated, and the flowers bloom again. Maybe, Ferdinand had the right idea after all.

Maury Football Team Has Another Good Year; Commodores Win Seven, Tie One, And Lose Two

When the Commodore squad of 1938 began the practice routine at the beginning of September, there were few Maury football followers who expected the Commodores to attain the heights reached at various times during the season. Prospects were good, but not too good. Maury is a large school, however, and contains "full many a gem of purest ray serene," athletically speaking, who are apt to mix up all the metaphors and dope by rising from the dark unfathomed ranks on the football bench and shining brightly, regardless of the opposition in any given year.

This happened in 1938, when new candidates filled in the places of those who had been graduated; new names on the score card; new stars in the Maury football firmament. At the close of the season, the Commodores of 1938 could look back upon seven victories, one tie game, and two closely contested losing battles.

After two weeks of practice in September, Coach George Hope and Assistant Coach Sidney Hughes selected the starting line-up which was maintained more or less throughout the season; Dave Fitzgerald and George Guy on the ends, massive Bill Canada and Joe Long at tackle, Teddy Barsell and Harold Hudgins at guard, Hewitt Dunn at center, Joe Eichelbaum at quarter, Raymond Ellis, Emil Serlich, and Oliver Hanbury in the backfield. Another sterling back during the season was husky Virginius Stell, a converted end with the drive and defensive tactics of a bull, and we don't mean Ferdinand.

Ellis Rips "Off-tackle" Behind Guy and Hughes

The first game of the season was played in September at Paterson, New Jersey, a return engagement with Pompton Lakes High School. Played in the rain on a slippery field, the game resulted in an unlooked for victory for the Commodores. A pass from Ellis to Guy set the ball in scoring position, and Serlich went off tackle for the first touchdown of the campaign. Later Canada and Guy blocked a Maroon kick and Guy picked up the skidding ball and ran thirty yards for the second score. Maury 12, Pompton Lakes 0.

The next game, also away from home, found the Commodores in their first conference tilt with Jefferson Senior High in Roanoke. A bright sun shone down upon the two teams impartially as the contestants battled hard but to no advantage, and the result was other members of the Presidential party, but once more the tide which has favored the Commodores in recent years was taken at the flood by the Maury team, and once more the Presidents went down to defeat. Maury 20, Woodrow Wilson 0.

The Commodores then went on a short cruise across the Roads to Newport News, and there met up with a much improved Shipbuilder team. Spurred on by the efforts of its stars, McClelland and Sokol, the Newport News Typhoon played on even terms or better with the Sons of Maury until, finally, Serlich sifted through from the eighteen-yard line to score the lone winning touchdown. Maury 7, Newport News 0.

another tie that binds our school so closely with our friends from the Magic City. Maury 0, Jefferson Senior 0.

And then came the opening home game of the year at Foreman Field, with the Hampton Crabbers as opponents. Fate seems to have destined a fine home debut for the sons of Maury, and fate did us proud in this important Tidewater game. More than one Commodore eleven in past seasons saw its record smashed by the mighty little school from across Hampton Roads. This year it was different. In a game featured by the running of Phil Edmonds of Hampton and the clicking of the Maury passing combination of Ellis to Fitzgerald for the winning score, the whole Maury line from end to end turned in a fine performance, while Stell and Eichelbaum played stellar defensive ball. Maury 6, Hampton 0.

Woodrow Wilson of Portsmouth invaded Foreman Field the following week-end, and a great crowd saw these two ancient and friendly rivals, the Commodores and the Presidents, forge another link in the traditional football chain that extends back through the years. Walter Dixon of Portsmouth played valiantly, as did ley Technical High School of Washington, D. C. The Commodores still kept their goal line untarnished as they scored three touchdowns against the District team, and converted the extra points. Maury 21, McKinley Tech 0.

Then came the day, long to be remembered by Maury followers, when the team went to Petersburg. The day was dark and wet, heavy with forebodings of things to come. Hundreds of supporters journeyed by train and car to the Cockade City to see Maury and Petersburg play; each undefeated at the kick-off. His majesty, Jupiter Pluvius, reigned over Cameron Field that day as the two teams fought each other in a titanic muddle. The contest was so close that only a break for one or the other could decide the issue. A Petersburg punt was downed on the Maury ten yard line, and a moment or so later the slippery ball eluded the grasp of a Maury back, and the fumble was retrieved by Petersburg on the Commodore one yard line. A couple of tries and Everly leaped over the final line for the score. A lateral marked the point after touchdown, and for the first time Maury had been scored on and defeated, although making the larger number of first downs. The journey back was wet and cold. Maury 0, Petersburg 7.

This mid-season sag in the fortunes of the Commodores manifested itself again the following week-end as the John Marshall team from Richmond won the next Foreman Field game. Maury was able to stop the onward surge of the John Marshall line and the great playing of the Richmond quarterback, Tommy Moncrief, but fell victim to a long forward pass that Keyser, John Marshall end, grabbed from the stratosphere beyond Maury's defensive backs and continued a few yards unhindered for the score. Maury had the same opportunity in the second half as it struggled onward toward the John Marshall goal line, onward to the crowning moment of football, but the final passes fell short of the goal. The game was one of the most colorful of the season as the John Marshall Cadet Corps and Band were present and lent a military atmosphere to the gridiron battle. Maury 0, John Marshall 6.

The next game, with Washington-Lee High School of Clarendon, was an illustration of the general truth that it is never safe to play the Commodores after they have lost a couple of games. The local boys bounce back. Maury, crushed to earth, shall rise again. That was the slogan of the Commodores as they went into action against the Generals from Northern Virginia. Washington-Lee had a plucky football team, but they were definitely outclassed as the Mauryites rose to former heights. Maury 37, Washington-Lee 0.

Thanksgiving Day arrived and with it the annual Turkey Day football classic with Thomas Jefferson High School of Richmond, at Foreman Field. Another dark and gloomy day, but this time, as the Maury Band played "Maury Will Shine Tonight," the Commodores were not to be denied. They closed their season with a satisfying victory over the Jeffersonians, as Serlich found his way for fifteen yards through the opponents' line for the first score, and with Dave Fitzgerald receiving a Hanbury pass over the goal line for the second and final touchdown. In the final moments, amid the gathering darkness, a Jefferson end who was far out from the milling players rose from obscurity and clutched a long pass as he plodded his weary way without opposition toward the goal line for the lone Richmond marker. Maury 13, Thomas Jefferson 6.

Thus ended another season. The Commodores had scored 116 points total to the opponents' 19; they had played together without thought of stressing individual ambitions, but rather with the slogan of "One for all and all for one." This is the greatest tribute we can give, as we look back upon the loyalty and perseverance of the team and reserves on the Maury football squad of 1938.

A TOAST TO THE COMMODORES

Let others sing of Service teams, of Army and the Navy;
 Of Mascot Mules and Billy Goats, of grand old Slum and Gravy.
 Let others sing of Gray Cadets, and Caissons rolling by —
 Me? I'll take the Commodores, the Sons of Maury High!

Let others sing of Duke and Pitt, of Iron Dukes and Panthers;
 Of Notre Dame and Southern Cal, of Rose Bowls and Acanthus.
 Let others sing of Franklin Field, and Durham's snowy sky —
 Me? I'll take the Commodores, the Sons of Maury High!

Our record would be incomplete if we did not again give credit to the staff of the Norfolk Division of the College of William and Mary for their splendid assistance at the Stadium, to the Maury High School Band for its contribution of color and stirring marches, to our friendly opponents and rivals, and to the thousands of Maury supporters who have cheered the Sons of Maury High!

1939 Basket Ball Team Small But Cagey

Coach George Hope had to build his basketball team from the ground up this year, and since the boys available weren't so tall, Maury had to be content with a fair to middling season, with seven wins and ten losses.

Vincent Thomas and Aubrey Power were the only reserves from the previous year, but various positions were filled capably by Julius Rubin, Jack Callahan, James Macon, George Guy, Virginius Stell, John Peterson, and Harry Gustin. As a whole, the team was light in weight and had to rely upon a flashy attack and speed to counter the usually larger teams they played.

The traditional game with Maury Alumni, led by Archie Carroll, was an encouraging beginning for the Mauryites, who took the game this year 40 to 39, with Julius Rubin making fifteen points. The University of Richmond Freshmen, however, humbled the Commodores by 37 to 26.

Hampton's Crabber team, with Vanderweigh in form, showed promise of the championship caliber that marked its play all season by defeating the Commodores next in the Maury Gym by 31 to 20. This was followed by the game with the Newport News Shipbuilders, who always play a superior brand of basketry, and once more the Hopemen fell, victims of the Commens, by the score of 35 to 24.

Maury's hopes took a rise in the next game, played against Thomas Jefferson of Richmond, when Callahan and Rubin combined forces to put the T-Jays in the Monticello by the score of 27 to 14, which was followed by another victory, this time over the Portsmouth Presidents, 47 to 29. This two-game streak of wins was rudely shattered by Hampton, who, undertaking no policy of appeasement in their march to the title, defeated the locals 22 to 17, with Vanderweigh and Rubin starring.

In the first of two games with John Marshall of Richmond, the Commodores made the score 40 to 34, and again defeated Thomas Jefferson by a decisive margin, 45 to 29. Coach Day's Petersburg team, one of the best this year, took the Mauryites 43 to 39 as the Crimson Wave, under Captain Jacobs, played fine basketball.

The Commodores bowed themselves out of the District title in Newport News when the latter team played "A-Tisket, A-Tasket" and found those little baskets in sufficient quantity to lead by 43 to 32, Sokol starring for the Shipbuilders, and Rubin and Power playing well for Maury. Hope-well, the next night, found the Commodores in a playing mood, and the game furnished a thriller in which King of Hopewell made twenty-two points and brought his team to victory, 50 to 48.

"On to Richmond" was the war cry of the embattled Commodores as they went on a four-game trip to the historic surroundings of Williamsburg and the Capital City. The stop-over at the College of William and Mary and the ensuing contest with the Freshmen resulted in a loss for the Maury team by 39 to 26. The battle of Williamsburg was followed by an assault on the Justices in Richmond, and John Marshall reached another famous decision by the score of 32 to 30. The next night saw the University of Richmond Freshmen again defeat the Mapmakers by the close score of 23 to 20, with Stell starring for Maury and Pitt for the college team. This series of defeats was broken on Saturday when the strong Central District Petersburg team found Maury slightly superior in the final road game, 23 to 20.

Home again, the Commodores lost no time in making ready for their traditional last game with Woodrow Wilson. The Presidents, not particularly strong during the season, made a gallant stand but bowed once more to the Maury team, 41 to 24. Outstanding for Maury were Julius Rubin, Jimmy Macon, Jack Callahan, Vincent Thomas, and Aubrey Power, who sang their swan songs.

A glance at the season's record will serve to indicate a satisfactory but not outstanding campaign. In victory or in defeat, the games were closely contested and played with commendable spirit. Thus ends another season.

The 1959 Indoor Track Season

Graduation took a terrible toll in the ranks of Coach Casey's harriers and left him with the task of rebuilding from a handful of returning lettermen. The complexity of the situation was heightened by the problem of defending the Scholastic Championship at the University of North Carolina Indoor Games at Chapel Hill.

After frenzied practice, Coach Casey was rewarded with the first gleams of a successful team. At this crucial moment, disaster chose to strike and the slim chance Maury had possessed disappeared as Coach Casey went under the surgeon's knife with an apendectomy. However, the team made the trip to Chapel Hill and entered the tournament.

The youthful and untried Commodore harriers made a gallant bid, but they were no match for the pick of the South's scholastic tracksters. The meet, however, added much to the experience and ability of the Maury harriers and prepared them for the coming outdoor season.
